

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

August 25, 2011

Contact: Melia Carter

708-224-1900

Ministers Launch Petition Drive to Bring Benefits of Broadband to Communities in Need as Quickly as Possible

Detroit, MI – Today, the Ministerial Alliance Against the Digital Divide (MAADD) announced a petition drive to encourage policymakers to support steps that will expedite the implementation of President Obama’s National Broadband Plan, particularly in lower income and rural communities. The group will collect signatures at events in states across the country and online. In Detroit, the group kicked off the national effort at the Speak Out, Speak Up! event on August 25th.

Last year, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) developed and released a National Broadband Plan aimed at expanding affordable broadband capability to all citizens -- even in economically challenged and rural areas across the country. Efforts are currently underway to implement this plan, but with millions of Americans still unconnected in an increasingly digital society, MAADD feels that time is of the essence.

“Broadband can bring endless opportunities for people that have traditionally been left behind in society. From online education to healthcare to job searching, broadband is truly a life-changing technology,” said Reverend D. Alexander Bullock, President of the Michigan Chapter of MAADD. “President Obama crafted a plan that puts our nation on track to eliminate the digital divide. But we can’t wait for it to happen. We need this plan to become a reality now.”

MAADD’s petition calls on President Obama to support the following steps to accelerate the implementation of the National Broadband Plan to benefit many economically challenged communities across the country:

- Fast-track the implementation of the proposed wireless spectrum auctions to increase the availability of faster high speed wireless Internet service.
- Promote private investment in broadband through corporate incentives such as the approval of the AT&T/T-Mobile merger which will bring state-of-the-art wireless broadband investment to more than 97% of Americans without increasing the deficit or spending taxpayer money.
- Speed up the overhaul of the Universal Service Fund to facilitate the rapid expansion of broadband service to high cost areas.
- Support projects that will implement broadband more aggressively in the healthcare industry and in our nation’s energy grids to drive down costs for consumers.

“The National Broadband Plan is a historic initiative that will be the largest stimulus to our economy and to Interstate commerce since President Eisenhower created the Interstate Highway system,” said MAADD National President Reverend Roosevelt Watkins. “Therefore, we need to make sure that there is no delay in getting the benefits of this life changing plan out to the people that need it most.”

MAADD’s petition can be viewed online here.

The Ministerial Alliance Against the Digital Divide (MAADD) is a 200,000+ next generation civil rights organization led by ministers devoted to bridging the Digital Divide and promoting personal and economic development in low-income and minority communities across the country.
